The Importance of Saving Money...

It's never too early to start teaching kids about money. Grade-school age is a perfect time to start teaching them since children are learning addition, subtraction, and other math concepts at school.

Parents can establish some important skills, such as saving, even with younger students. As children get older, they can begin to make some decisions about money, such as how to spend their allowance or how much money to deposit into the bank each week.

Over the next few months, we'll share tips on teaching kids about money:

1. Play games that have to do with teaching kids about money.

Board games such as Monopoly and Life can be a fun way for kids to learn. So gather your whole family around your favorite game and let your grade-schooler unleash her inner mogul.

Presidential Pets

U.S. presidents and their families have typically liked animals. Creatures from mice to bears have made a home at the White House and its grounds. The following list of presidential pets is not complete, however, as no doubt many a presidential cat or cow passed through without much public notice.

George Washington: Polly the parrot, 36 hounds, and horses.

Thomas Jefferson: A mockingbird and two bear cubs (from Lewis & Clark).

Abraham Lincoln: Jack the turkey, goats named Nanny and Nanko, ponies, cats, dogs, pigs and a white rabbit.

George H.W. Bush: Millie, a Springer spaniel; Ranger, one of Millie's pups.

Bill Clinton: Socks the cat; Buddy, a chocolate Labrador retriever.

George W. Bush: Spot the Springer Spaniel, Barney the Scottish terrier, and India ("Wille") the cat. In 2004, the President gave his wife, Laura, a Scottish terrier puppy named Miss Beazley for the First Lady's birthday.

Barack Obama: Bo and Sunny, both Portuguese water dogs.
